What Happened to the Cattle Market?

by: Jerry Nine – Woodward, Okla.

I'm not real sure how the packer or the retailer or both broke the cattle market down like they did this time when I'm sure they wanted to for the past 2 years and didn't. This time they came out with the news we are closing 2 packing houses and supposedly cutting kills at another. If they would have wanted to keep the market up there they would have said we are closing the 2 packing houses but keep in mind the one facility is 43 years old and needs drastic repair and sometimes better to tear down and move the fat cattle to their other facilities.

The problem with our business is we are so controlled by futures and one or two drastic moves often gets the funds in there selling hard and a lot of fund money comes from investors who have no idea of where their money is being invested nor do they care. Most are just saying to their commodity man make me more money than I can make putting my money out on interest.

I like what Pres. Trump has done for America in a lot of way. Particularly getting control of our border, which before we had lots of people coming in that hate America. But naturally I do not like the decision to import more beef. There are better way of achieving a better goal and still get grocery prices down. I still think putting a rebate on all beef for the next 90 days would be perfect and won't cripple a lot of cattlemen in the process. Most cattlemen that had cattle on grass are trying to decide what to do now because they are worth less dollars per head then when they bought them.

I told a friend of mine that I like him enough that if the 2 of us were on a boat and it was sinking and there was only one life jacket left. Well I would really miss him a lot.

I went to a psychiatrist today. He told me that I have a split personality. When I was leaving he charged me $200. I gave him $100 and said get the rest from that other idiot.

Editor's note: The views expressed here are the author's own and do not represent the view of The Penny News. Jerry Nine, Woodward, Oklahoma, is a lifetime cattleman who grew up on his family's ranch near Slapout, Oklahoma.

This is really deflating

Sedation Dentistry Calms Fears...
Take a pill and snooze through your dental appointment.

For many Americans, going to the dentist is a frightful event. If you are one of the 145 million people who avoid the dentist due to fear, we have the solution... Sedation Dentistry.

You can now experience your dental appointment through a totally relaxed and comfortable environment. With the help of Sedation Dentistry, you will wake up to find that your dental appointment is over and the restorations have been completed painlessly.

For those with a busy schedule, we can accomplish more dentistry in one appointment which means fewer visits to the dentist.

Sedation Dentistry is available for everything from simple restoration to the most complex procedures. We are very sensitive to our patients needs, especially those with high fear and apprehension. Now we can put an end to anxiety with this safe and wonderful technique of sedation.

We are proud to be able to offer Sedation Dentistry and offer hope to those who have been avoiding the dentist due to fear. If you would like to know more, call our team with your questions.

New Big Elk Stadium Press Box Showcases Local Craftsmanship

September 3, 2026 - Elk City, OK – Elk City Public Schools has completed construction on a new press box at Big Elk Stadium, a project Superintendent Mike Sparks says represents both a major improvement to the facility and the work of local businesses and craftsmen.

The new press box made its debut last Friday with the start of the 2026 football season. The district had been working toward the project for some time, with the Elk City Board of Education considering bids for the renovation earlier this year.

“It was something that’s kind of been in the works, and you couldn’t have asked for it to turn out any nicer than it did,” Sparks said. “It ought to be here for a long time.”

One of the most notable aspects of the project is how much of the work came from Elk City businesses and workers.

“Everything but the bricks on the outside,” Sparks said. “We had to buy the bricks from outside of Elk City, but other than that everything is here local, absolutely.”

Redibuilt Metal Products & Construction handled the project from demolition of the old press box through construction of the new facility. According to the company, every stud and steel component of the new structure was welded as part of the locally built project.

Other local contractors involved included Culver Electric,

Kilhoffer Flooring, Jerry’s Glass, Jr. Noblitt LLC, Michael Poole and Pop and Sons Insulation.

The brick was provided by Martinez Brick.

For Sparks, the local involvement gave the project additional significance beyond simply replacing an aging press box.

“You’ve got a lot of people born and raised here who had a hand in putting this thing together,” Sparks said. “I think, again, that’s one of the things about this community, especially me being somebody new, you find out how much this community means to people, and they had a lot of personal touch put in on this building.”

Burns Flat Spaceport Selected for Up to 100 Microgravity Test Flights

September 2, 2026 - Burns Flat, OK – The Oklahoma Infinity One Spaceport at Burns Flat has been selected as the operations site for a new series of commercial microgravity missions that could include as many as 100 flights over two years.

Astral Materials has selected Dawn Aerospace’s Aurora spaceplane as a high-cadence test platform to accelerate development of furnace technology designed to manufacture advanced materials in microgravity.

Under the agreement, an initial campaign of Aurora microgravity flights will be conducted from the Burns Flat facility. The missions will allow Astral Materials to repeatedly test and refine its technology, with Aurora designed for turnaround times of approximately four hours.

Astral Materials is developing microgravity furnace hardware aimed at producing higher-quality semiconductor crystals and other advanced materials. Reducing the effects of gravity can limit convection and sedimentation during manufacturing, potentially producing crystals with fewer defects and greater consistency.

Those materials could eventually be used in photonics, quantum computing, advanced computing and high-power electronics.

“To realize our mission, we need engineering platforms that let us test often, learn quickly, and continuously improve our technology,” Astral Materials CEO Dr. Jessica Frick said. “Aurora gives us a practical pathway to rapidly validate our manufacturing systems as we scale toward commercial production in orbit.”

The Aurora spaceplane is designed to fly experiments into microgravity and return them to researchers shortly after landing. Astral officials say an experiment could be recovered in about 45 minutes, adjusted on the ground and potentially flown again later the same day.

Dawn Aerospace says Aurora can support up to 100 flights per vehicle annually. The frequent flights are intended to shorten development cycles that can take years when researchers rely exclusively on orbital laboratories.

The Burns Flat missions are not intended to replace longer-duration orbital research. Instead, Astral plans to use the Oklahoma flights to develop and mature its furnace systems before moving them into orbit.

Dawn Aerospace is developing its U.S. operational base at the Infinity One Oklahoma Spaceport in partnership with the State of Oklahoma.

Commercial flight operations from Burns Flat are currently planned to begin in 2028. The western Oklahoma facility is being developed to support frequent commercial suborbital flights and microgravity research, potentially making Burns Flat a significant U.S. testing location for companies developing next-generation space manufacturing technologies.
