Major Investment in Panhandle Cattle Research

A major investment in beef cattle research is coming to the Texas Panhandle, where West Texas A&M University in Canyon has received a $9.75 million grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture to help build a new beef cattle research facility.

According to a report from NewsChannel 10 on October 7, the federal award is the largest in the university's history. With additional matching funds, the project is expected to total $19.5 million.

The planned facility will expand opportunities to study cattle feeding, animal health, nutrition, and beef production. Its design includes 90 smaller research pens for scientific studies and 45 commercial-scale pens, allowing researchers to examine cattle under different conditions and at different scales.

Plans also call for specialized facilities for cattle handling, veterinary care, feed production, and metabolism research. These resources are intended to help researchers better understand how cattle grow, use feed, and maintain health throughout the production process.

The project also has an educational purpose. West Texas A&M expects the research operation to help train undergraduate and graduate students, as well as prepare future professionals for careers in the cattle industry. The university's broader agricultural programs serve a region where cattle production and feeding are important parts of the rural economy.

For producers across the eastern Texas Panhandle and Western Oklahoma, research into feed efficiency, animal health, and production practices can have practical value. Feed is one of the major expenses in cattle feeding, and improvements in how efficiently animals convert feed into weight gain can affect the cost of producing beef. Research into cattle health and management can also help identify ways to improve animal performance.

The new facility is part of a broader effort to strengthen agricultural research and education in the Texas Panhandle. By bringing research capabilities and student training together, the project aims to support the next generation of people working in beef production.

Although construction and development remain ahead, the investment represents a significant commitment to cattle research in a region closely tied to the beef industry.

As cattle producers continue to face changing markets, input costs and production challenges, research conducted close to home could help provide useful information for the future of Southern Plains agriculture.

Property will be offered at public auction to the highest bidder, subject to Seller's confirmation. The successful bidder will be required to execute an Oklahoma Real Estate Purchase Contract immediately following the auction and deposit 10% of the total purchase price as earnest money.

All bidders must be prepared to provide proof of funds or proof of financial ability to complete the purchase upon request. The remaining balance will be due at closing, which shall occur on or before 45 days following the auction. The sale is not contingent upon financing, appraisal, inspections, or any other buyer contingency.

 The property is being sold AS-IS, WHERE-IS. Prospective buyers are encouraged to conduct all inspections, investigations, and due diligence prior to bidding.
 Real estate taxes will be prorated as of the date of closing. Possession will be given at closing. Announcements made on the day of the auction shall take precedence over any previously printed or advertised information. Additional terms and conditions may apply.

Elk City Fire Department Receives Grant to Replace Aging Tanker Truck

October 10, 2026 - Elk City, OK – The Elk City Fire Department will soon be able to replace a 43-year-old tanker truck thanks to a grant worth approximately $500,000.

Elk City Mayor Micah Kilhoffer discussed the award during a recent interview, explaining that Fire Chief Kyle Chervenka and the department have been pursuing the grant for nearly 20 years without success until now.

The funding will allow the department to replace a tanker truck dating back to 1983, providing firefighters with updated equipment for emergency response.

Kilhoffer emphasized the wear and tear fire trucks experience, particularly when carrying heavy loads of water.

While residents may see fire trucks parked at the station or participating in local parades, the mayor said the demands placed on those vehicles during emergencies are considerable.

He noted that replacing the aging tanker will be a significant improvement for the department, especially given the high cost of firefighting equipment.

The grant represents a long-awaited investment in the city’s emergency response capabilities and will help ensure Elk City firefighters have reliable equipment to serve the community.

ODOT Eight-Year Plan Targets Major Highway Projects Across Western Oklahoma

October 7, 2026 Oklahoma City, OK – The Oklahoma Department of Transportation is planning a new round of highway and bridge improvements across western Oklahoma, with projects in Beckham, Custer, Washita, Roger Mills and Greer counties included in the agency’s newly approved Eight-Year Construction Work Plan.

The Oklahoma Transportation Commission approved ODOT’s Federal Fiscal Year 2027-2034 plan this week. Statewide, the plan includes 1,229 highway and bridge projects valued at more than $7.3 billion. The projects are intended to address some of Oklahoma’s most pressing pavement, bridge and highway safety needs.

Much of western Oklahoma falls within ODOT District 5, and one of the most prominent projects in the new plan is in Beckham County.

ODOT lists planned modifications to I-40 interchanges in Elk City among the significant projects included in the statewide plan. The improvements come as Elk City continues to see development along the interstate corridor. Regional transportation planning documents have previously identified additional interchange work near the Walmart and Love’s area for around 2030.

Custer County also has significant work planned. One project calls for widening and resurfacing approximately eight miles of SH-33 beginning about 4.5 miles east of US-183 and extending northeast toward Thomas. The project would add shoulders to the two-lane highway and is currently scheduled for fiscal year 2031. ODOT has estimated construction at about $17.4 million.

Interstate improvements are also planned around Clinton. The I-40 interchange serving the city has been targeted for improvements designed to maintain access to Clinton and nearby businesses while addressing four bridges considered at risk of becoming structurally deficient.

In Roger Mills County, US-283 remains a focus for improvements. Plans for the corridor call for pavement improvements and the addition of shoulders along US-283 from approximately eight miles north of the Beckham County line north to SH-47 at Cheyenne. The work is intended to improve safety along the rural highway.

Washita County is also targeted for rural highway improvements. A section of SH-152 beginning at SH-44 and extending approximately 5.5 miles east has been identified for grade, drainage and resurfacing work aimed at improving safety on the two-lane highway.

Additional pavement, bridge and highway improvements are planned throughout District 5, including work affecting Greer County as ODOT continues addressing aging infrastructure across southwest and western Oklahoma.

Statewide, the eight-year plan calls for improvements to 596 miles of rural two-lane highways and 2,980 lane-miles of pavement currently rated in fair or poor condition. ODOT also plans to repair or replace 188 at-risk bridges and address 10 bridges classified as structurally deficient.

However, ODOT officials caution that inclusion in the Eight-Year Construction Work Plan does not guarantee a project will remain on its current timetable. The plan is updated annually as funding, engineering needs and construction costs change.

Transportation Secretary and ODOT Executive Director Tim Gatz said inflation and fiscal constraints are making it increasingly difficult for the department to keep pace with Oklahoma’s transportation needs. ODOT says the construction industry has experienced the equivalent of nearly 18 years of inflation since 2020, forcing several projects beyond the current eight-year planning window.

Despite those pressures, ODOT officials say projects moved outside the eight-year window remain priorities and will continue through the development process so they can advance when funding becomes available.

ODOT has used the Eight-Year Construction Work Plan process since 2002, with the agency’s eight district engineers reviewing needs each year before the updated plan goes to the Oklahoma Transportation Commission for approval.

Image

To millions of fans, John Wayne was a cowboy. Strong and generally silent, fighting bad guys, saving the day. That's the image that captured hearts.

That image didn't come quickly. He earned it by playing those roles repeatedly through a career that spanned 45 years. From his hat, boots and revolver, to his unusual walk and speech pattern, and his characters' willingness to stand up to corrupt power and evildoers of all kinds. All of it shaped his image.

Over time, people came to see John Wayne as the embodiment of things they admired and even aspired to.

High profile people have an image that they cultivate and carefully guard. Singers, actors, politicians, athletes, entrepreneurs. How people view them helps determine their professional success.

Successful local businesses have an image, too. Local businesses that struggle either have a bad image or, more likely, no image at all.

What people think of a business—if they think of it—matters very much. What shoppers think of a particular company determines whether they spend money there or somewhere else.

With celebrities, we tend to use the term image. But with businesses, we talk about its brand. They're the same thing.

"Your brand is what other people say about you when you're not in the room." -Amazon Founder Jeff Bezos

The aesthetics of a business matter. Is it clean and neat? Does it look modern? Does it smell good? What about the lighting? How are customers greeted and treated—friendly and fun or cold and formal?

That's just the outside. What a business really IS matters even more—what it believes and stands for; how its owner sees the world; the principles it won't compromise no matter what. What are a company's values, and what is its personality? How does it really do business?

The way the business is portrayed in its public messages matters a great deal.

"Every advertisement should be thought of as a contribution to the complex symbol which is the brand image. If you take that long view, a great many day-to-day problems solve themselves." -David Ogilvy, Confessions of an Advertising Man

A business should build and display an image that's true to itself. It can't be made up. It has to be an authentic representation of the owner and the company.

People need to be themselves, and a business needs to be itself. The image, or brand, should simply reflect what the business is. A business's ads should reveal that image.

The image is NOT "great service, quality products, good prices, and family-owned." Those things may be true, but they're also claimed by most local businesses. Those things don't distinguish a business and set it apart, any more than a man being 5 ft. 10 in. tall with brown hair and blue eyes distinguishes him from all the others.

A man trying to win a woman's heart doesn't list his physical characteristics and then hope for the best. He shows her his personality—who he really is. Aesthetics are important, but personality wins hearts.

Common surface traits don't make for a brand that gets remembered. As Ogilvy said, businesses that put that kind of message forward end up "with a brand that has no personality of any kind, a wishy-washy neuter."

Listing products and claiming great service makes a business blend in with ALL the other businesses that do the same thing. No personality emerges. "The manufacturer who dedicates his advertising to building the most sharply defined personality for his brand will get the largest share of the market at the highest profit." -David Ogilvy

If a business will decide what it really is, and then relentlessly reveal its image in messages week after week, it will pay rich dividends.

- Nathan Brewer
